Collaboration with healthcare system allows Saint Mary's student to take part in cancer research

Being able to say you completed a summer internship at Gundersen Health System Kabara Cancer Research Institute is great for a résumé, but it was only a side benefit. More importantly, for Saint Mary's University senior Kaydi Breeser, a pre-physician assistant studies major from Caledonia, it solidified her medical career aspirations — and it was an opportunity to play a small role in the fight against cancer. ## Saint Mary's alumna creates innovative airway used to provide anesthesia

Dr. Roxanne McMurray M'93, a nurse anesthetist by trade, never planned on starting a medical device company. "I never set out to be an entrepreneur," she said. "I am very content giving anesthesia.” But, as they say, necessity is the mother of invention. Read more.

University unveils new look and distinct, but familiar, messaging

Saint Mary's rolled out the results of a branding refresh in June, and yes, there's a new logo, but Shannon explains that branding is so much more than a logo: "A brand is the sum total of all of the images and feelings that someone holds about an organization and its services or products," she said. "A brand is our promise, and our audiences determine whether we deliver on that promise." Read more.
